No Objection To Declassification in Full 2010/08/27 : LOC-HAK R-11 0-5-42-1 9.20.14 SENATORS ASKING TIGHTER C.I.A. REIN Weicker and Baker Call for a Joint Unit to Oversee Intelligence Activity By DAVID BINDER Special to The New York Times WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 — While President Ford and Secre-tary of State Kissinger conferred today with nine Congressional leaders over United States intelligence practices, two Senators introduced a bill to reform and broaden legislative control of the intelligence community.

Controversy over the covert operations of the Central Intelligence Agency, specifically in Chile in 1973, apparently prompted the President and Mr. prompted the President and Mr. Kissinger to meet for breakfast with the four Senators and five members of the House of Representatives for 90 minutes in which, a White House spokesman said, they had a "full and frank discussion" of intelligence procedures. frank discussion" of intelligence procedures.

"The discussion also dealt with executive and legislative responsibilitity for intelligence policy, said the spokesman, John W. Hushen, the acting White House press secretary.

At the same time, Senators Lowell P. Weicker Jr. and Howard H. Baker were presenting their bill to create a "Joint Congressional Oversight Committee" to keep watch on the intelligence community.

Congressional overseeing of intelligence operations now is intelligence operations now is the responsibility of two Senate and two House subcommittees of the Armed Services and Ap-propriations Committees. The propriations Committees. The two Republican Senators spon-soring the bill said they be-lieved that "there has been no effective oversight" of the inon the Senate floor, they swiftly gained 11 co-sponsors, almost all of them Democrats considered liberals. But skeptics, including some members of current committees dealing of current committees dealing with overseeing, pointed out that over 100 similar proposals had failed in the past. They expressed doubt that the bill of Mr. Weicker, who is from Connecticut, and Mr. Baker, of Tennessee, would get any further. Negative Effect Is Seeen A Congressional aide familiar with overseeing functions remarked that one unresolved problem was whether Congress would or should go beyond overseeing intelligence practices and actually participate alongside the executive branch in authorizing or rejecting spein authorizing or rejecting specific operations.

Each is effectively canceled

No Objection To Declassification in Full 2010/08/27 : LOC-HAK R-11 0-5-42-1 tion sport leaked security informalater made his summary of that report available to the press.

This is regarded as "a breach of House rules" and, a Congressional side said, may make for difficulties for the Weicker-Baket hill because of senaitivity about leaked security informathous house is shoug leaked security information. tative Michael J. Harrington, Democrat of Massachusetts, to read, Mr. Harrington's office of Mississippi,
The sessions, often extremely Informal, are usually initiated by the committee chairman, but are sometimes called at the suggestion of William E. Colby, the Director of the C.I.A. Usual.
Iy no written reports are made.
Iy no written reports are made.
But last April, when Representative Nedzi was conducting a secret hearing on the intelligence agency's operations in Chile, there was a written report that it as allowed Representative Michael Representative Michael Representative Michael Representative Michael I. Harrington. of Mississippi. gence subcommittee, under Sen-ator John C. Stennis, Democrat gence subcommittee of the five-member Senate Central Intelli-In practice, a Congressional side said, legislative oversight has been maintained by the seven - member House Intelligents and the seven an employ of the seven and the seven supportant the seven supportant the seven supportant seven supportant seven supportant seven supportant seven supportant seven supportant seven The Hararington Disclosure consumer. both as an observer and as a In a brief speech this morning. In a brief speech this morning. Senator Stuart Symington, Democrat of Miscouri, said: What is needed is a serious effort to bring Congress into a meaningful relationship with the intelligence community both as an observer and as a properly and our committee is totally informed." and a member of the same committee, "As far as I am concerned the C.I.A. functions on questions related to secu-rity-classification of secrets and involvement of the C.I.A. in the Watergate affair.
"Naturally I am opposed."
Hebert, Louisians Democrat Rebert, Louisians Tedward and a member of the same comgroup had been "quite active" in recent months, particularly Bray, Republican of Indiana, who is on the House Intelli-gence subcommittee, said his tarked.

In telephone interviews, several Congressmen on the present committees voiced opposition to the Weicker-Baker bill. Representative William G. Biray, Republican of Indiana, who is on the House Intelliguation. committee, chosen by the Con-gressional leadership, with membership periodically ro-tated "We say on a suggesting deci"We say on a sign and a sign a At a news conference, neither Senator Weicker nor Senator Baker was very clear on this, though Mr. Weicker said that foreign policy but doesn't know the intelligence end of it." committee on antenigence knows the intelligence but can't pects, such that foreign Pela-picts, and the Foreign Relations Committee can deal with the Committee can deal with the Committee can but desern't foreign policy but desern't property.